By components of the tourist GDP, in the fourth trimester 2023, the Services are to 1.1% of the recorded in the previous trimester, while the Goods have presented an increase +3.8% regarding the recorded in the third trimester 2023.

Economic Context (Ministry of Finance)

Domestic

In the first quarter of 2024, Mexico's economic activity continued to grow. On the one hand, there was a positive momentum from investment, which continued to grow and reached peak levels. This in an environment of high levels of business confidence, changes in global trends and relocation of companies. In this context, based on the timely estimate of the first quarter of 2024, economic activity increased 1.6% annually and 0.2% quarterly, with seasonally adjusted figures. In its interior, services grew 0.7% over the previous quarter, while primary and secondary activities fell 0.4% and 1.1%, respectively

On the other hand, there was a decrease in consumption of domestic goods and services, after the latter grew strongly after the COVID-19 pandemic. However, the strength of the labour market and the rise in real wages generated high levels of consumer confidence which, together with the appreciation of the exchange rate, favoured increases in some areas of private consumption, such as imported goods and new car sales.

On the external sector side, tourism showed remarkable growth due to the greater influx of international travelers, while remittance flows continued at peak levels. In addition, with the latest available information, there was a greater uptake of Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), particularly in the manufacturing and financial services sectors. For their part, exports grew moderately during the quarter, mainly non-automotive manufactures, but the generalized rise in all components of imports dominated.

International

In the first quarter of 2024, the pace of global economic activity accelerated with respect to the previous quarter, derived from growth in China, Europe and other emerging economies. This, despite the restrictive monetary stance of the world's major central banks.

With respect to inflation at the global level, it fell more gradually and with certain rebounds during the period as in the case of the USA. This reflected, on the one hand, a greater persistence in the prices of accommodation and transport services, and the mismatches in the labour market. On the other hand, global supply shocks linked to the energy sector occurred, which had an upward impact on prices and inflation expectations.

The pace of growth of the US economy was higher than expected by the analyst consensus at the beginning of 2024, although lower than the previous quarter. The US economy recorded quarterly growth of 0.4% real in the first quarter of 2024, above market expectations at the beginning of the period of 0.2%, although below 0.8% of the previous quarter. At home, private consumption made the largest contribution to GDP associated with the strength of the labour market.

The pace of economic activity in China increased at a quarterly rate of 1.6% real, from 1.2% of the previous quarter, higher than projected by the analysts consensus at the beginning of 2024. This dynamism was attributed to a better performance of industrial production and gross fixed investment compared to the previous quarter; however, growth was limited by the weak performance of the real estate sector, high public debt and trade tensions with the US.
